After the high of last summer's World Cup win England start their next cycle towards the 2023 tournament in India with a three-match one-day series against South Africa. In the six months since that dramatic final against New Zealand at Lord's in July Eoin Morgan and his players have had plenty of time to reflect on their achievement of becoming the first England team to win the tournament.

2. _____

Oil giant British Petroleum has agreed a £474m ($625m) deal to sell a package of North Sea assets. Premier Oil will take over the Andrew platform and BP's controlling stake in five surrounding fields, as well as its minority stake in the Shell-operated Shearwater field. A total of 69 staff on the Andrew assets are expected to transfer to Premier. BP said the move was part of a 'reshaping' of its North Sea portfolio.

3. _____

Facebook has announced it will remove videos modified by artificial intelligence, known as deepfakes, from its platform. Deepfakes are computer-generated clips that are designed to look real. The social media company said in a blog that these videos distort reality and present a 'significant challenge' for the technology industry. While deepfakes are still relatively uncommon on the internet, they are becoming more prevalent. AI software creates deepfakes of people - often politicians or celebrities - by merging, replacing, or superimposing content on to a video in a way that makes it look real.

4. _____

Training for and completing a marathon improves the health of a new runner's arteries, cutting about four years off their 'vascular age', a study suggests. Researchers from Barts and University College London tested 138 novice runners attempting the London Marathon. Over six months of training, their arteries regained some youthful elasticity, which should reduce the risk of heart attacks and strokes. And their blood pressure fell as much as if they had been prescribed pills. Those who were the least fit beforehand appeared to benefit the most.

5. _____

Joker leads the Bafta film nominations with 11, but there is criticism that the acting categories are all white. Joker is followed by Martin Scorsese's The Irishman and Quentin Tarantino's Once Upon A Time... In Hollywood, which have 10 nominations each. Scarlett Johansson and Margot Robbie are up for two acting awards each. But no female directors were nominated for the seventh year in a row. Bafta boss Amanda Berry said she was 'very disappointed' by the lack of diversity.

THE FACEBOOK PARTY THAT BECAME A RIOT

It began as a plan for a very normal 16th birthday party. Merthe Weusthuis wanted a quiet celebration with a small group of friends in her family home in the small Dutch town of Haren. Like many teenagers, she decided to send out invitations via a social network site. But Merthe made one big mistake: she used open-access settings on Facebook, so it wasn't just her friends who could see details of the event, lots of strangers could too.

The number of invitation acceptances quickly snowballed into an avalanche. Not marking the event as 'private' meant the electronic invitation was eventually seen by 240,000 people, of whom 30,000 confirmed online that they planned to attend. To make matters worse, an unauthorised campaign was launched to promote the party by means of a dedicated website and Twitter account, which received hundreds of thousands of hits. The party became known as 'Project X Haren' after the 2012 American film Project X in which three high school students throw a birthday party that spins out of control. Video trailers for Merthe's party were produced, with scenes from Project X edited in, and they were posted on YouTube. T-shirts featuring Merthe's face were also made, all without her knowledge or consent.

Even after Merthe's parents had cancelled the party, the publicity didn't stop. Local media reported on the forthcoming event and teenagers turned up to have their pictures taken outside the Weusthuis family home. On the evening the party was to have taken place, about 5,000 teenagers began gathering in Haren, many outside the Weusthuis house. When it became clear that there was nothing to gatecrash, violence broke out and 500 riot police equipped with helmets, shields and batons were brought in to control the crowd. Shops in the centre of Haren were vandalised and looted, journalists were attacked, cars were set on fire or overturned and street signs and lamp posts were damaged.

However, Facebook was also involved in the clean-up effort in the days after the riot. A group called 'Project Clean-X Haren' was set up to gather and organise volunteers. Another group named 'Suspect-X Haren' was created to help police identify and arrest the rioters by sharing photos and videos of the event.

1. When Merthe sent her invitation to the birthday party
 - a) she chose a very strange way of asking people to come.
 - b) she wanted everyone on Facebook to see her invitation.
 - c) she wanted to invite her close friends only.
2. After Merthe's invitation appeared on Facebook
 - a) those who saw it were slow to respond.
 - b) more than 10% of those who had read it sent her a message.
 - c) most people thought it was a joke.
3. Some Facebook users
 - a) were asked by Merthe to promote her party on Twitter.
 - b) prepared a video invitation on YouTube without Merthe's permission.
 - c) wanted to record the birthday party and post it on YouTube as 'Project X Haren'.
4. The riots in Haren broke out because
 - a) the police provoked the crowds gathered around Merthe's house.
 - b) the party started later than planned.
 - c) the party didn't take place.
5. After the riots
 - a) people volunteered to help the police find the vandals and looters.
 - b) Merthe asked people on Facebook to help clean Haren up.
 - c) hundreds of riot photos were published on the Internet by the police.

Ex 2. Transcript:

P: As many as one in eight adults now work nights and, on average, we sleep six and a half hours a night – or day – compared to eight or more in earlier times. We may see this 24-hour culture as a sign of progress, but recent research suggests nightlife and reduced sleep is bad for us. Here to discuss this is Sean O'Brien, who works nights at a 24-hour restaurant, and Professor Caroline Bray, a sleep expert. Sean, first you – I think you work nights by choice, right?

S: Absolutely. I've never really been a morning person. I was always late for school and struggled there, so nights are good for me. And it's a different atmosphere. People don't rush so much, they're more relaxed. Honestly, you have amazing conversations at 4 a.m. that you'd never have in daylight!

P: Caroline?

C: Yeah, I mean, obviously, Sean is happy in his work, which is great, and I think it probably helps that he's chosen his lifestyle. But what we've found is that, on average, night workers age quicker and don't live as long. They get fatter, have higher rates of heart disease and suffer from depression more ...

P: Wow! And that's because of what? Lack of sleep?

C: Night workers do sleep less, but it seems that daytime sleep is also different. So, for example, you use 15 percent less energy sleeping during the day, which is why night workers put on weight. In fact, our whole bodies work differently at night compared to the day. Our heart, our body temperature – everything's controlled by a natural system we can't change. It's just how we are.
